Bugs Bunny scampered up the path to Petunia's house and rapped on the kitchen door. "Hi, Petunia," he called out cheerily. "I have a present for you!"

Petunia opened the door and cooed in surprise, "A present? For me?" But her face fell when she looked inside the brown paper bag Bugs held out to her. "Why, Bugs," she cried in a disappointed voice, "there's nothing in here at all!"

Bugs looked at her in innocent amazement. "There must be!" he protested as he grabbed the bag and peered inside. "Ho, Petunia," he chortled, "look!" And, reaching inside, he pulled out a big bouquet of flowers!

Petunia's eyes flew open wide. "Mercy!" she exclaimed, "how did you do it?"

"Magic," Bugs said. "I'm studying it."

Petunia eyed the loose coat he was wearing. "Has that coat sleeve anything to do with it?" she asked suspiciously.

"A little," Bugs admitted coyly.

Just then, the back door slammed and Porky came in. "Hey, Bugs," he said warningly, "you'd better beat it. Elmer Fudd saw you take his flowers, and he's mad."

As if to prove the truth of Porky's words, there was a loud pounding at the door. "Come out, you wascally wabbit!" Elmer shouted.

"Jeepers!" Bugs exclaimed, "He does sound as if he means business, doesn't he?" Suddenly, he had an idea and snatched up a bunch of carrots from Petunia's kitchen table. "The Mighty Magician will now perform," he said grandly. "Open the door and let me at old Fuddy-Duddy!"

"I hope you know what you're doing," Porky said as he flung open the door.

"AHA!" Elmer shouted angrily, "at last I have you, you burglaring bunny."

"Wait!" Bugs cried. "If you'll just restrain yourself, chum, I'll let you in on some of my magic secrets!"

Elmer sniffed. "Magic secwets, indeed!" He shook his fists angrily. "Wait till I get my hands on you, you wobber! I'll show you a twick you'll wemember!"

"Hold it, Fuddsy," Bugs pleaded. "Give the Mighty Magician a fair chance."

Elmer hesitated, interested in spite of himself. "Okay. But it better be good!"

"We have to go back to your garden for this trick," Bugs said as he led the way.

At Elmer's garden, Bugs waved the group to silence and circled his hands over the ground. All the while, he was shaking Petunia's carrots, tucked secretly in his huge coat sleeves, down toward his hands.

Then, with a flourish, Bugs pretended to be plucking something out of the ground. Each time, he really dropped a carrot from his sleeve into his hand and then, with a gesture of triumph, displayed it to his friends as if he had just uprooted it.

"What do you think you're doing?" Elmer demanded when he saw the carrots from his special flower garden.

Bugs rocked back on his heels. "Why," he said airily, "I've transformed your flower garden into a vegetable garden with one mighty magic trick!"

Elmer began to splutter. "I'll magic twick you," he shouted angrily, making a dive for

Bugs left the ground. "And now I'll show you how to make someone REALLY disappear!" he announced brightly as he turned and ran away as fast as his legs would carry him.
